Madrid, November 25, 2025. Crescenta, Spain's first digital asset manager for private equity fund investments, has begun the marketing of its new fund Crescenta Private Equity Growth Top Performers III, FCR. This is the third edition of its flagship vehicle, which offers exposure to megatrends and technology companies through a selection of funds.

"Private Equity Growth managers specialize in identifying and scaling the major winners of the next decade. We invest in funds managed by firms that have spent decades investing in companies leading megatrends and that have successfully positioned themselves as market leaders," explains Ramiro Iglesias, CEO and co-founder of Crescenta.

The new vehicle seeks to achieve a net annual return of 18% and to multiply the investment by 2.5 times, with a target size of €50 million. The portfolio will be composed of a selection of between 5 and 7 funds, with a unique combination of three strategies: Private Equity Growth, Private Equity Tech Buyouts, and Venture Capital secondaries. The strategy of the underlying funds, backed by deep sector expertise, focuses on identifying technology companies in advanced stages of expansion that combine operational stability with high appreciation potential.

"We are launching a new edition of our flagship fund following the strong reception of the first two vintages and once again increasing the target size. With Growth III, we aim to capture the potential offered by technology companies, whose greatest growth phases occur in private markets," highlights Ramiro Iglesias.

The vehicle invests in international funds managed by firms with decades of experience that have identified the leading technology companies of recent years. Its first investment has been in a fund managed by Hg, a firm specialized in acquiring technology companies. From a geographic perspective, the fund will focus on the United States and Europe, which concentrate the world's main hubs of technological innovation.

In terms of portfolio construction, the fund will combine exposure to the primary market (80%) with selective participation in secondaries (up to 20%), enabling risk diversification, access to Venture Capital strategy companies, and a reduction in risk and the J-curve effect. This structure provides access to multiple value creation engines and optimizes risk-adjusted return generation.

This is a closed-end fund with an estimated duration of 10 years, during which the first 4–5 years are expected to be dedicated to capital calls and the following 5–6 years to distributions. It should be noted that this is an illiquid fund. Objective based on simulated historical net returns obtained by previous funds with the same strategy as the selected underlying investments and managed by the same asset managers as the selected underlying investments, under a conservative scenario.
